Someone asked -- "How about this town,
Is it pretty good place to live,
Is it friendly and nice --- and say,
How far do its borders extend?
Let me inquire of its churches, its schools and its pride,
And is it difficult to acquire new friends?"

Well, we have been here a while and many contend
It's the best place to live in the world.
There are lots of nice folks - but let me tell you my friend
It's just like all towns where you have been

There is good and there is bad, there is sadness and joy,
There are builders and dreamers too.

Here you will find a few wreckers
And some chronic complainers,
But of the latter you find only a few.
When put to the test we are like all the rest
For the old formula is so true,
That you will find what you seek
Because your goals depend strictly on you

Now you look like the kind of member we need,
We invite you to come join our crew,
We are looking for builders, that's what we need,

And the reason we would like to have you
There are mountains to climb, and goals to pursue,
There's a challenge for a person like you.

We extend to you a welcome - come on and help build
There's a need and a place for your skill.

Get lost in the job of improving this place
While you still have the strength to spend.
You won't have to wonder if you'll find any here,
There will be hundreds that will call you a friend.
